

Happy New Year! The Hundley's are it again, making 2011 one of our busiest years yet. Jay is still working for the Baltimore District Corps of Engineers, assigned to the Ft. Detrick Integrated Program Office in the state of Maryland.

Seeking a little adventure and change of scenery (and looking ahead to retirement), Jay took a six month deployment to the Middle East in September 2011. Jay is currently the Resident Engineer for a substantial barracks construction project at Bagram Airfield in Northern Afghanistan.

Jay is enjoying the deployment as he experiences the Middle East culture and meets contract employees from all around the world. He is making close friendships with his Corps of Engineer teammates, Turkish contractor employees, and local Afghans. This experience is making Jay realize the smallness of this world and the awesomeness of God's handiwork.

Jackie continues to teach computer science courses at Auburn University and is "ABD" (all but dissertation) with regard to her doctorate degree. She is enjoying having Josh around.

This past summer, Jackie took a break from teaching and traveled. She visited Williamsburg, Virginia with her sisters and mother in May, toured Napa Valley and San Francisco, California with Rachel in July, and drove from Idaho to Alabama with Josh in August. She and Josh made stops at Mount Rushmore, Yellowstone National Park, and Jackson, Wyoming.

She spends most of her time compiling research for her dissertation and preparing for her classes but manages to exercise regularly and sing with the Auburn First Baptist Church choir. This year, she is looking forward to graduating and returning to hobbies like quilting and family history research and traveling, especially to visit Rachel.

2011 was a fun year for Josh as well as he worked toward a Master's in Aerospace Engineering from the family Alma Mater, Auburn University.

Being a student is considerably more fun than work, albeit a little humbling. Josh spent most of the year researching Unmanned Air Vehicle crashes in Iran and Afghanistan to assemble a report on the state of the art for the FAA.

This summer Josh beat the southern heat with a fellowship at the Center for Space Nuclear Research at Idaho National Labs (DOE). In honor of his 30th birthday, Rachel visited Josh, and they took a trip to nearby Yellowstone National Park. They had a blast discovering hidden waterfalls, bubbling sulphur caldrons, and one of the NASA moon landing training sites.

He is glad to be back in Alabama finishing his graduate degree (with high marks!). Now all he has to do is pick a thesis topic.

Rachel began the year as litigation attorney at a large firm in New York City. In April, her firm had its fourth reduction in force, and she decided to change paths and open her own small business. She is proud to announce the start of Flarcie's Classic American Bakery, named after her maternal grandmother. In an even more unexpected twist, she will be moving to the west coast this month to open her bakery in sunny Santa Cruz, California.

Rachel also traveled quite a bit during this year of transition. In January, she spent two weeks traveling through China, Tibet, Nepal and Taiwan with a close friend from NYC. Other trips include a two-week road trip around France with her boyfriend, Steve, a week in California wine country with Jackie, Yellowstone with Josh, and a second scouting trip to California with Steve, who is joining her in California. She is excited about the year ahead. Happy New Year to you and yours!
